

Ask for a new page

How many pages each plan holds, how to tell a new page from a new section and what to send us to ask for one.

Maybe catering deserves its own page, or you're launching a summer menu. Here is how pages work in your plan, and how to ask for one.

How many pages you have

- Launch holds up to 5 pages.
- Growth and Growth + Voice hold up to 10.
- Growth adds a new page each quarter, and Growth + Voice adds one each month. If you're getting close to the number your plan holds, we'll tell you before it becomes a problem.

Your order form shows the number for your plan.

Is it a new page or a new section?

Many ideas fit on a page you already have. A new service can be a new section on your Services page. A holiday menu can be a short block on your Menu page. A page earns its own address when it has plenty to say: catering, a big repair, a seasonal menu, a service you want people to find by name.

What to send us

1. The idea: what the page is for and who it's for.
2. The facts: what you offer, what's included, what it costs or "ask for a quote", and how to book or reach you.
3. Photos, if you have them.
4. Where it should be linked from: the main menu or a section of another page.

A rough list is enough. We'll write the page from your facts and send it back for you to check.

What it costs

If the page is part of your plan, there's nothing extra. If your plan is full or the page is beyond it, we tell you in writing what it would involve before we start. Nothing is billed unless you approve. You may also decide that moving up to a plan with more pages makes more sense. We'll lay out both.

Good to know

- A page needs to stay true. If it's about an offer that ends, tell us when to take it down.
- We only use facts you give us. If we need to guess, we'll ask.
- A page for every neighborhood with the same words copied in doesn't help your customers, so we'll suggest something better.
